

NSA REVIEW COMPLETED

| Sanitized Copy Approved | for Release 2 | 2010/06/11 : CIA | RDP85T00287R0001015 | 560001-0 ( 1 |
|-------------------------|---------------|------------------|---------------------|---------------------|

13 July 1980

MEMORANDUM

SUBJECT: Iran: Popular Discontent and a New Phase of Revolution

Ayatollah Khomeini has responded to signs of growing popular discontent by calling for renewed attacks on opponents of the revolution and an intensification of the effort to form a truly Islamic society. The clerical revolutionaries have used these exhortations to weaken Bani-Sadr as well as the leftists. The clerics efforts to push the "cultural revolution" over the next six months will further reduce government efficiency and cause more economic disorder and unrest, but the religious revolutionaries can use their revolutionary committees and street gangs to intimidate opponents. Khomeini's opponents are still disorganized. None of them has both the stature and the will to pose a successful challenge while Khomeini is alive and active.

25X1

The continuing efforts of the clerics to emplace a truly Islamic society together with the government's inability to restore normal economic activity and maintain law and order have resulted in a perceptible increase in discontent in Iran over the past few months. Some middle class Iranians, who maintain telephone contact with exiles in West Europe, have been especially bitter in their complaints. Exile leaders are using their radio stations in Baghdad to stoke the discontent.

25X1

The Iranian middle class did not play a decisive role in the revolution, however, and is not a key factor in the current scene. The mood of the less affluent—the small shopkeepers, government and factory workers, and students, who form the bulk of Khomeini's constituency—is far more crucial, but also more difficult to judge. The lack of major strikes suggests that discontent is not acute.

25X1

This memorandum was prepared by the Southwest Asia Analytic Center, Near East South Asia Division, Office of Political Analysis. Comments or queries may be addressed to Deputy Chief, Southwest Asia Analytic Center

25X1

PA M 80-10312C

25X1

| • ,  |  |  |   | 25X - |
|--|--|--|---|------------------|
| •  |  |  |   | 237              |
|  |  |  |   |                  |
| It appears, how increased and that, continuing to wane. drawn steadily less attendance at leftisclerics seem now to street gangs rather to intimidate oppone | at minimum, and Revolutionary enthusiastic and trallies has in be turning more than attempting | or for the rerallies in Tead smaller croncreased. Thetowards the | evolution is chran have bwds, while he revolutionary Hezb-e-Allah | 25X <sup>2</sup> |
| Khomeini's Concerns  |  |  |   |                  |
| Khomeini is clelosing momentum. Afthe Ayatollah in middecrying factionalisrevolution.  | ter months of r-May reemerged  | near politicalto give numen  | inactivity,cous speeches                                      | 25X <sup>2</sup> |
| during one meeting lthe leftist Mujahedi   | n had attracted  | l a large crov   | essed thatvd to its   | 20/              |
| major rally in Tehrawere growing in stre   | n and that, in   | general, the   | leftists  | 25X′             |
| Khomeini again cultural revolution. public squabbling and the government for as in the pastas a badly served by the Council.                                 | Khomeini hasnong his aides ats poor performdefender of th                          | called for an and strongly of mance. He poster poor who as                       | n end tocriticizedctrays himselfce being              | 25X′             |
| The Ayatollah sthe left, especially seriously concerned support, particularly young people.  | that the Mujahe  | . It appearsedin may be e  | that he isroding his  | 25X <sup>2</sup> |
| A Political Reorder:   | ing. The Left  |  |   | 20/              |
|  | natic interventics in Tehran acollah's critic  | s leaders andisms. The le  | groupsftists  | 25 X ′    |
| fears it iundergrouIslamic Ro  | dinthe largesis to be made and. It appearsepublic Party hnd attempt to d       | scapegoat andthat the cleape soon to a                                       | d has gonerics of therres t Mujahedin              | 25X1             |
|  | - 2 -  |  |   |                  |
|  |  |  |   | 25X′             |

| Sanitized Copy Approv             | ved for Release 2010/06/11 : CIA-RDP85T00287R000101560001-0                                  |               |
|-----------------------------------|--|---------------|
| ,                                 |  | 25X1          |
| •                                 |  |               |
|                                   |  |               |
|                                   |  |               |
|                                   | ndependent Marxist Fedayeen which also has directly criticized by the clerics, appears       |               |
|                                   | ave split.   | 25X1          |
| Mosco                             | the majority faction nowwith ow's blessingemulates the pro-Soviet Tudeh                      | 25X1          |
| Party                             | y in voicing support for the Khomeini regime.  |               |
|                                   |  | 25 X 1 |
| Althou                            | ugh Foreign Minister Ghotbzadeh has recently   |               |
| lamba                             | asted the Tudeh Party as a tool of the Soviets,  |               |
|                                   | eini and the clerics have not directly denounced pro-Soviet Communists. We have reports that |               |
| some                              | Tudeh officials are becoming critical of   |               |
|                                   | aborating with Khomeini, however. They argue such a policy offers only temporary protec-     |               |
| tion                              | and hinders Tudeh efforts to recruit among   |               |
| the d                             | disaffected.   | 25X1          |
| Impact on Bani-                   | -Sadr and Beheshti   |               |
| Khomeinils                        | s sharp criticisms of strife within his  |               |
| movement moment                   | tarily cooled the contest between Bani-Sadr  |               |
|                                   | We cannot divine Khomeini's motives for his tionalism. It is possible that acting on         |               |
| attacks on factadvice from an | ti-IRP elements in his entourage, the Imam   |               |
|                                   | Beheshti before he could reach preeminence   |               |
|                                   | ossible rival for attention. It is equally ver, that Khomeini simply saw such conflict as    |               |
| damaging the re                   | evolution, Iran and Islam.   | 25X1          |
| Whatever 1                        | Khomeini intended, he seems principally to   |               |
| have damaged Ba                   | ani-Sadr, perhaps fatally. Bani-Sadr briefly   |               |
|                                   | ray the Ayatollah's remarks as a license to nment towards effectiveness under his control.   |               |
| Most Iranians,                    | however, probably saw the criticism as aimed   | 05V4          |
| at Bani-Sadr be                   | ecause he heads the government.  | 25X1          |
|                                   | and his clerical followers on the other hand,  |               |
|                                   | s speeches on the necessity of a cultural a license to intensify efforts to construct an     |               |
| Islamic state of                  | dominated by their party. The IRP quickly  |               |
|                                   | hat it rather than Bani-Sadr and the moderates, implements the Imam's line. The clerics took |               |
| the lead in pu                    | rging hundreds of "anti-Islamic" people in the   |               |
| ministries, man                   | ny of whom were Bani-Sadr's supporters. The effort to eliminate the Mujahedin appears        |               |
| also designed :                   | in part to deprive Bani-Sadr of support.   | 25X1          |
| _                                 |  |               |
|                                   | - 3 -  |               |
|                                   |  | 25 X 1 |
|                                   |  |               |

| And a superior distribution control to the super |               |
|--|---------------|
| Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2010/06/11 : CIA-RDP85T00287R000101560001-0  | 25X1          |
|  |               |
| Some of Bani-Sadr's closest associates are now saying that his days as a political force are numbered. Bani-Sadr may somehowperhaps by persuading Khomeini to intervene-halt the IRP's rapidly increasing momentum, but this episode shows again Bani-Sadr's long term prospects of surviving as an effective political force are not good. He simply cannot match the IRP's political tactics and appeal.   | 25X1          |
| The selection of a new prime minister will be a benchmark in the Beheshti/Bani-Sadr tussle. Beheshti and his associates almost certainly hope to install someone they can control. The IRP hopes the new prime minister—instead of the president—will control the government while allowing Beheshti to continue to operate behind the scenes.   | 25 X 1 |
| If the IRP emerges victorious, Beheshti will have to play his cards very carefully. The IRP does not appear to to be tightly organized. Once the opposition is eliminated, another ambitious clergyman might decide to challenge Beheshti's authority. Beheshti, moreover, possesses little personal popularity and some members of Khomeini's entourage seem to fear his ambition and want to undercut him. Some knowledgeable observers believe that Khomeini himself will not permit Beheshti to obtain much more power lest be come a rival.   | 25X1          |
| Longer Term Impact   |               |
| To satisfy Khomeini's longings for a purer Islamic Republic as well as to satisfy the mullahs who form the moving force in the IRP, Beheshti and his associates will probably continue to press the cultural revolution even after Bani-Sadr is vanquished. These efforts will further disillusion the secular middle class. These grumblers will be increasingly intimidated as purge committees in the ministries and in the security forces search out and eliminate opponents of the revolution.   | 25X1          |
| Pursuit of the new theocratic order will further setback efforts to restore the economy causing growing hardshipsfor the Khomeini's supporters in the lower middle class,especially the among urban workers. The clerics probably  |               | expect that loyalty to Khomeini and Islam will continue for some time to outweigh difficulties in the public mind. If necessary, Beheshti will also use his thugs to beat back public signs of opposition such as strikes and marches.

25X1

25X1

| Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2010/06/11 : CIA-RDP85T00287R000101560001-0  |      |
|--|------|
|  | 25X1 |
|  |      |
| As signs of increased discontent appear, exiled Iranians will be encouraged to plot more vigorously a return to power. None of the exiles, however, possesses enough popularity to attract the people away from Khomeini. Some, like former Prime Minister Bakhtiar and General Oveisi, are tainted by their previous collaboration with the Shah's hated regime. The various liberal politicians in West Europe are virtually unknown except among the now impotent middle class. Other generals, who at one time opposed the Shah, have been in exile for so long that they also are little known and unlikely to spark the imagination of the public. | 25X1 |
| The exiles could elect to try some bold venture such as an invasion into an outlying part of the country. Such an effort would be a significant gamble and could quickly fail if Khomeini is in sufficiently good health to rally the rank and file in the military to move against the invaders who would be labeled as against Islam and tools of imperialists.  | 25X1 |
| In sum, the regime's power base is continuing to narrow but Khomeini is not yet vulnerable. His opponents are still disorganized and leaderless and his charismatic appeal remains a potent intimidating factor.   | 25X1 |
| Essentially unpredictable events, such as the death of Khomeini either naturally or by assassination, however, could dramatically change the prospects for the revolution. Beheshti and his associates certainly are aware of their vulnerability once Khomeini is gone. This realization, in fact, is probably a major factor motivating them to seek a   |      |
| decisive victory over their opponents now.   | 25X1 |

SUBJECT: Iran: Popular Discontent and a New Phase of Revolution

Distribution:

- 2 DCI
- 1 D/NFAC
- 1 NIO/NESA
- 1 D/OPA
- 1 PDB Staff
- 1 C/OPA/SAAC
- 1 C/OPA/NESA

  1 PPG (No further distribution) #13
- 1 OPA/PS (No further distribution)
- 1 OPA/SAAC/Iran chrono

(13July1980) NFAC/OPA/NESA/SAAC/Iran

25X1